

Adventures in Shilling #031: THOR, Country, Highbar, Agave

It's time for another edition of Adventures in Shilling, in which we fight shilling the best way we can, by shaming tasteless, unscrupulous shills into submission. Well, that's the plan, at least. Fight shills yourself by dropping offensive links to tips@eater.com

We've got another one from Citysearch here, from another user writing their first ever review. What do you know? It's a rave for Agave: "I was there on Friday night with a couple of friends and we had dinner outside. It's such a cute place, very crowded and a lot of fun. We started with some margaritas at the bar, the bartender told us we should go for the agave nectars and they were excellent! They use organic agave nectar which gives a little sweetness but not too much and it's made with partida tequila which i was not familiar with and it's really good. We then wanted to try some other tequilas cause the bartender kind of got us all excited with the huge selection. So he gave us this tequila called 7 leguas in the reposado version and it was incredible!!!...It was my first time here and i will be back soon."

Shill Probability: 89%

